DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

2. Claims 1, 16-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Claim 20 recite "system" which is vague and indefinite since a system may be one of several different statutory classes of invention (including a method or an apparatus). Applicant must indicate on the record what statutory class of invention the system claims belong to. For the purposes of this examination claim 20 is considered apparatus.

Claims 16-19 recite "exchange" which is vague and indefinite since an exchange may be one of several different statutory classes of invention (including a method or an apparatus). Applicant must indicate on the record what statutory class of invention the exchange claims belong to. For the purposes of this examination claims 16-19 are considered method.

In claim 1 there is claimed "an opportunity" which is considered a relative term and therefore vague and indefinite. What is considered an opportunity to one may not be considered an opportunity to another.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

3. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

4. Claims 1-15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 as non-statutory because the method claims as presented do not claim a technological basis. Without a claimed basis, the claim may be interpreted in an alternative as involving no more than a manipulation of an abstract idea and therefore non-statutory under 35 U.S.C. 101. In contrast, a method claim that includes in the preamble and body of the claim structural / functional interrelationships that are solely by computer (and non-trivial) are considered to have a technological basis [See Ex parte Bowman, 61 USPQ2d 1669, 1671 (Bd. Pat. App. & Inter. 2001) – used only for content and reasoning since not precedential].

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. Claims 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Levine et al in view of Johnson et al.

Levine et al discloses a method for trading financial products over a computer network. There is received seller information from a first client where at least some of the seller information comprises due diligence information capable of fulfilling at least a portion of a request for due diligence on a financial product (col 15, lines 6-10). The seller information is stored in a database and a second client is provided with an opportunity to obtain the due diligence information on behalf of a potential buyer of the financial product (col 15, lines 11-20).

Levine et al does not explicitly disclose:

storing a bid for the financial product from the second client in the database, if it can be shown the second client has obtained the due diligence information; and, computing a price for the financial product offered for sale, the price based in part on the due diligence information.

Johnson et al discloses storing a bid for the financial product from the second client in the database, if it can be shown the second client has obtained the due diligence information (para 0148), and computing a price for the financial product offered for sale, the price based in part on the due diligence information (para 0111).

It would have been obvious to one with ordinary skill in the art to include storing a bid for the financial product from the second client in the database, if it can be shown the second client has obtained the due diligence information because Johnson et al teaches bid comparisons and due diligence are related and therefore important to store after clients have received information (para 0148).

It would have been obvious to one with ordinary skill in the art to include computing a price for the financial product offered for sale, the price based in part on the due diligence information because Johnson et al teaches valuation and due diligence are linked and required for financial product trading (para 0111).
